BAILEY, THE ABCH-HYPOCRITE.

The supreme court having decided not to interfere in the case of ex-Senator Ralph J. Burton of Kansas, that statesman will soon be sojourning behind the bars as a common felon. It will be remembered that at the last session of congress one Joseph W. Bailey of Texas was virtuously indignant because Burton had not been expelled from the senate. What was it that Burton had done that should have caused Bailey to storm in this melodramatic manner?

Burton, it will be remembered, while United States senator, appeared as a lawyer before the postoffice department, representing a client who for various reasons wanted to violate the postal laws against illegitimate business. That was wrong in Burton; wrong ethically, and wrong from the standpoint of the law, for a United States statute had been passed prohibiting a congressman from practicing before any of the departments. It is no more than just, therefore, that Burton should be punished for his violation of the law.

But it certainly does make a man's red blood boil to think that that Texas hypocrite Bailey should have cried out against his fellow-sinner when his own hands bore the same marks of guilt. The only difference between the two men was that Burton was extremely crude in his methods, and played for very small stakes, while Bailey was consummately shrewd, and played for millions.

Bailey didn't practice before one of the departments. There wasn't enough money in it. Bailey knew that the Standard Oil had been driven out of Texas, and that it wanted back. It's wrong for a senator to use his influence before a department; it's perfectly right, according to the Bailey standard of morality, for a senator to use his influence in his own state in any manner he sees fit,—and remunerative. So, for the slight token of $200,000, Bailey, the immaculate, the saint, the impeccable, used his influence and succeeded in reinstating the Standard oil in Texas thru the dummy Waters-Pierce Oil company, which everyone in the entire country,—excepting the wilfully-blind Bailey, it appears,—knew was but an appendage of the Standard Oil.

And now, reader, which is the more manly: Convicted, jail-imprisoned Burton, or this oily, smooth, hypocritical Texan, who is rushing about his state these days appealing with husky voice to "my countrymen" for a vindication from the cruel assaults of his enemies? And which is better: Kansas, which repudiates those who who prove faithless to their trust; or Texas, which still clings Bailey to her bosom?

And it is even said that Bailey is coming to this territory to help Jeff Davis and Furman and Bob Williams and other precious saviors of society carry Oklahoma for the Democratic party!

MUST HAVE IT.

That Porter road seems to want to be wooed by Vinita. This city must go after it. If the road is to be built, it would be suicide to permit its construction thru towns west and south of here that would cut off from Vinita's trade. Vinita must get busy on this proposition at once.

Jeff Davis, it is announced, is coming over into Oklahoma again. Fortunately, he is to miss Vinita this time. This city has suffered sufficiently, it would seem.

And now don't you appreciate those sidewalks? Or, rather, wouldn't you appreciate them if they had been built?
